Chapter 1 by mindy bebee

If ones name is but a glimpse of their soul
Then we are simple machines on cruise control
When you put a name on a term such as love
Then it is merely but a concept you speak of
For desires so rich, not a single word can describe
No wealth in this world enough to my heart bribe

A bed of roses merely a vision of nature's beauty
For it was I that to you, failed to perform my duty
To your door I've tried and tried many times to knock
But you only slam the door, and closed it with a lock
On the exterior, you showed nothing and stood so tough
That this word called love would never be enough

But there I stood, hoping for a chance, a beginning anew
That day in my heart, looking in your sweet eyes I knew

At this moment, I realized that I only had a single shot

That then our hearts would melt like snow in the sun

Eye to eye, we shared a gaze one of eternal bliss

For it was that day we log
